Spyware Detection Alerts: Desktop Alerts: Network Alerts: Local Alerts: Policy Protection Alerts: Whats New Alerts: A Spyware Browser Blocker: What is Spyware? Spyware is software that is downloaded and installed by a third-party such as an adware company, not you! It gets installed on your computer and is very difficult to remove. It is best to avoid installing spyware in the first place but if it is unavoidable, then it is vital to get rid of it as soon as possible. System Sentinel is the only anti-spyware program that offers proactive protection to your computer. When you install System Sentinel it will monitor your entire computer for spyware. If you visit a website or download an attachment, it will download it to our online definition database and tell you the name of the app, company and website that was used to install it. This information is called a "DGA" or detection and go away agent. Your computer will not be infected unless you download it first, which may seem a little paranoid, but this prevents the adware companies from installing malicious software on your computer. Imagine the damage they could do if they were able to infect you without you knowing? The DGA database can be accessed anytime online from any computer, anywhere. You can download it from our website or from the ClamWin scanner if you want. Just remember to leave it running while you are on the Internet, so it can detect any spyware that you download or visit during the day.
