What's new in Evolution - Music Pack:

is a popular online game played on YouTube, Twitch, Mixer, and other streaming platforms. The game is popular among kids and college-aged males around the world. If you've heard about someone complaining about Cube Run or someone spouting off on the game at some point in your life, chances are he or she is referring to BC Cube. Cube Smash became notorious for the spectacular "3D" fatalities that occur often during the game. Here, we will go over what this is and how it happens. What Is BC Cube? BC Cube refers to a phenomenon of the dead human body in which a dead individual is levitated and spun around by an exoskeleton, during an unfortunate game of Cube Smash. It began as a case of one particularly obnoxious kid, Jon/Kongalyet, who seemed to transform into a jackass on the internet. But as the internet found out, this wasn't a case of a cocky yet stupid kid: This kid really experienced this. With no explanation as to how, the internet unleashed a tide of rage on Jon/Kongalyet, and this rage eventually spread to anyone who mentioned the Cube. Why Does it Happen? Wikipedia claims that B.C. was introduced to the concept by Kari of K-Spot, according to popular belief. Kari had been streaming BC Cube sessions on YouTube from 2012 to 2015. Unfortunately, Kari was killed in an EVA accident in 2014. After her accident, the use of BC became rather controversial; there are many different theories as to the death causes of Jon/Kongalyet. The most common theory is that Cube is just played too bloody hard. If the game goes long enough, the more things die during an unlucky game, the more likely it is that dead body will be spammed. But what about the fact that Jon/Kongalyet was doing this to people even after himself? Was this just a case of a bored kid not caring about whether to take more souls or not? Did he do this repeatedly until he reached finality? As it turned out, yes, according to Jon/Kongalyet himself. Although this is just a theory, there are a few facts that back it up. For instance, there was another kid who was doing BC Cube before Jon/Kongalyet. This other kid had died already; not only that, but he was doing the same
